A SUCCESSFUL FRENCH NEWSPAPER The Petit Journal with Its Phenomen

The greatest French newspaper is The Petit Journal, the circulation of which, at the present moment, exceeds 900,000, and before the end of the year, thanks to the excitement of election times, it will certainly reach the unparalled circulation of 1,000,000 copies a day. According to the latest statistics there are in France about 6,000,000 persons who read newspapers, and admitting that each copy of The Petit Journal is read by three or four persons, which is a low average, one may say that The Petit Journal is read by half the reading population of France. The Saturiay literary supplement of The Petit Journal, although it has only just completed the first year of its existence, has already attained a circulation of 200,000 copies, and is able to promise its readers original contributions by Zola, Halevy, Sardou, Dumas, Claretie, Daudet, etc. [Fortnightly Review.]

etc.

The results obtained by The Petit Journal are certainly marvelous, and its chief editor, M. Henri Escoffler (Thomas Grimm), has displayed remarkable tact and moderation in working the paper up to its present position. Owing to the immense number and variety of its readers, its articles must be absolutely moderate, unmilitant, and unobtrusive in the expression of opinion. A single word too strong, too decided, too positively expressive, in one direction is enough to cause an immediate decrease of 30,000 or 40,000 in the circulation. Even in the statement of mere news, of a street accident, for 40,000 in the circulation. Even in the statement of mere news, of a street accident, for instance, the slightest departure from strict moderation is immediately felt in the sales. The choice of the fauilletons is equally delicate. Boisgoby, Jules de Gastyne, Jules Mary, Montepin, Bouvier and Emile Richebourg are the favorites, and the publication of a sentimental romance of the latter gentleman in The Patit Journal suffices to attract 100,000 new readers, while a feuilleton by some other writer will cause a corresponding dimunition. The militant influence of The Patit Journal may be very great. At the time, for instance, of Marshal MacMahon's attempted coup d'etat, in 1877, the steady, calm and imperturbably moderate campaign of this little paper in favor of the republic was decisive in securing France from the grip of the reactionaries.

At this moment, now that politics is dull, The Petit Journal owes the continuous in-crease of its circulation mainly to its ex-cellent and useful articles on practical matcenent and useful articles on practical matters, savings banks, and everything that concerns the economy and interests of those who work. We must not forget, also, the great attraction, the Two Romans feuilleton. Since this method of publication was discovered by the founders of Le Siccle, about 1840, no newspaper in France has been able to exists without a feuilleton novel. The last attempt to dispense with it was made by the Franco-American Matin, but a few weeks sufficed to convince its proprietors that it was useless to struggle against a tradition which was backed up by all the women of France.

Slaves to Vehicles.

Easy carriages are a luxury and street cars are a great convonience, but the growing use of them is driving the people of our great cities out of the habit of walking, and consequently into conditions of physical weakness. Almost everybody in the cities rides. The wealthy merchant comes to his office in his easy carriage, his best paid clerks roll up in cabs, and the "common herd" of his employes comes in street cars. All ride, and all are forgetting, if they ever knew, how to walk.

Go through the day with the ordinary desk-clerk, the representative of thousands of lives in every city, and see how little he walks. In the morning he manages to walk from his bed to the breakfast table, and from the table to the street car track, formations. Sometimes, if he is feeling very strong, he even carries a came or an umbrella from the front hall to the street. Seated in the treet car, he rides to his office door and once more walks a couple of rods. If he has to go to an upper floor he sits in the elevator. Then until lunch time he sits stooped over his deak. Then, if all conditions are favorable, he sometimes walks—for he has not yet utterly forgotten how to walk to a restaurant in the next block and back to his desk, where he sits until a street car takes him home. If he goes out in the evening it is in a carriage with his young lady or in the street car with his family. He never walks when he can ride.

Substitute for Carbolle Acid.

Substitute for Carbolic Acid.

[Boston Transcript.]

The extraordinary power of napthol as an antiseptic and disinfecting agent has been known for a long time, but its disagreeable smell and the difficulty of preparing it in a purified state, with the occasional toxic action of the crude napthol, have been a bar to its use as a remedial and antiseptic agent. Justus Wolff. a chemist interested in coal tar products, has recently succeeded in producing it in a pure and odorless state in well defined crystals, and claims its antiseptical action is much greater than that of carbolic acid. Recent research has domonstrated that the toxic effects of crude napthol were due to the impurities it contained.

Dr. Shoemaker of Philadelphia, in a paper read before the Philadelphia County Medical association on the Medical Use and Value of Napthol, conclusively proved the non-poisonous character of the purified or odorless napthol by taking large doses internally. It has no corrosive action on the skin and will not injure textile fabries. As a remedial agent it acts with greater efficiency, and has many advantages over over each proper and has many advantages.

a remedial agent it acts with greater effici-ency, and has many advantages over car-belic acid; the fact of its being absolutely odorless will make it a desirable substitute. It is expected that it will shortly be pro duced on a manufacturing scale as a substitote for carbolic acid.

Electricity and Gas.

[New York Times.]

In the course of a recent paper on distributing light and heat and supplying heated air to ordinary gas burners, Mr. Frederick Semens, brother of the late Sir W. Siemens, expressed his opinion that the influence of electric lighting upon gas lighting had been very great. People had been accustomed at exhibitions and elsewhere to brilliant illuminations from single sources of light, and had called upon gas engineers to produce similar effects. The requirements of practical illumination had increased by degrees to such an extent that it was impossible to forece at present where and how this general tendency would end. [New York Times.]

Animals' Sense of Color.

Animals' Sense of Color.

The extent to which animals appreciate color is an interesting but unsolved problem. It is being investigated by J. Graber, who has experimented upon five mammals, seven birds, two reptiles, three amphibians, two fishes, three mollusca, twenty-seven insects, two spiders and two worms. He has found that the sense of color, as well as the power of perceiving light, is much more widely distributed among animals than has been supposed, although the variations in the sense of color and brightness in animals are great.
